

Figure 2

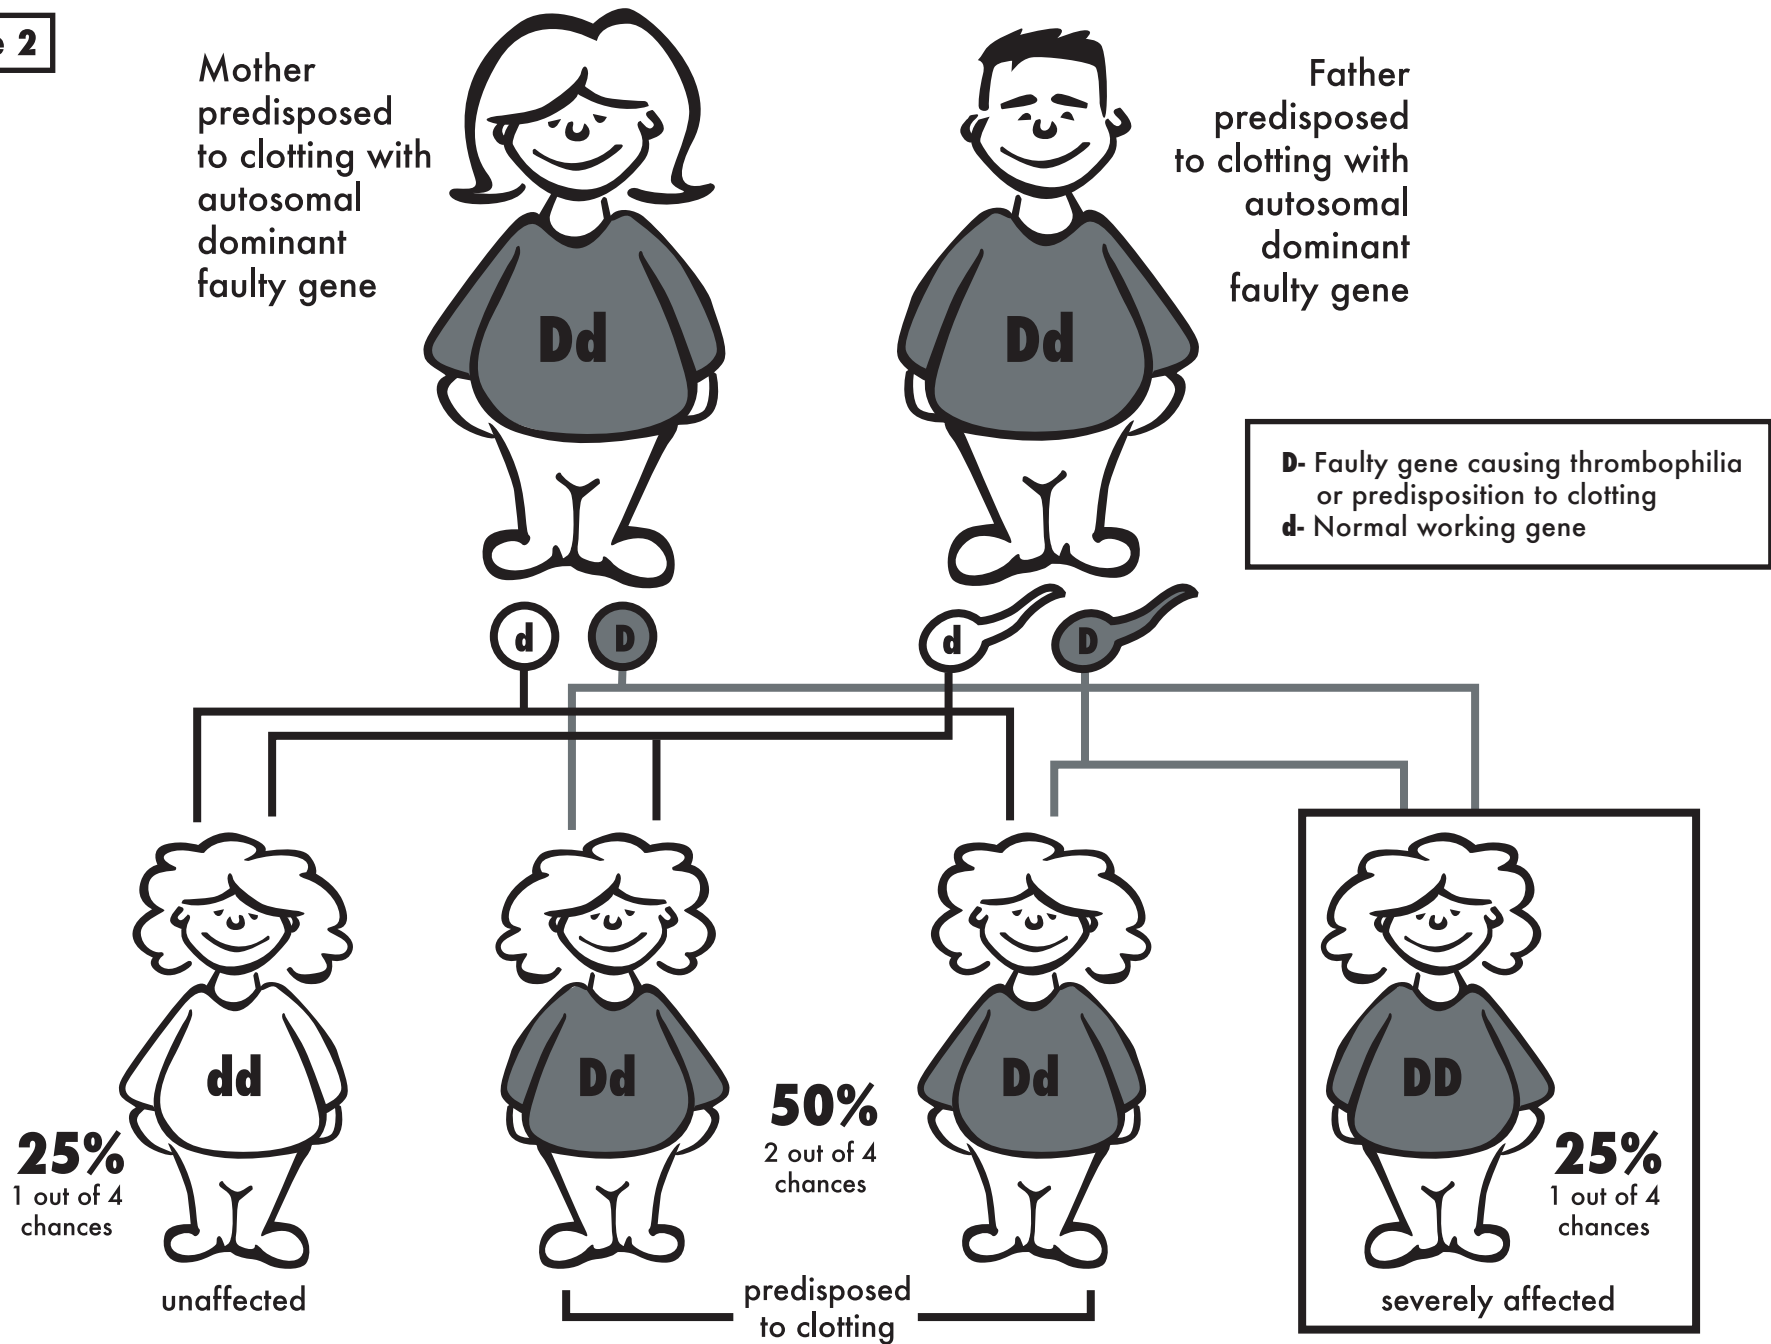

Figure 2 shows autosomal dominant inheritance when both parents either have a thrombophilia condition or are predisposed to clotting because they have inherited a faulty thrombophilia gene copy. This affects both boys and girls equally.